Self-Contradiction

CPYRGHT

To the Editor: Holmes Alexander, in the March 9 Register-Republic, derides as anti-American and semi-American those who oppose American intervention in foreign nations, and who object to police power, congressional investigations and "CIA or FBI activities that require snooping or spying."

Mr. Alexander then goes on to say " . . . it's of the utmost importance that this country live by its ideals and observe its code of honor." Could self-contradiction ever be greater? The imperial gambits abroad and the totalitarian methods which become daily more widespread at home violate all of this nation's ideals and codes of honor, and can only serve the purposes of the exploiting class.

Only in the classless society advocated by the Socialist Labor party, a society which will have no incentive for imperialism abroad or despotism at home, can America's ideals and codes of honor be maintained, and this classless society is advocated by the truest Americans.—George A. La Forest, Rockford, Member, Socialist Labor Party.
